Homecoming '88: A Grand Event

by Maryann Garbiński

You may have noticed this past weekend that there were many unfamiliar faces around campus. In case you did not know, they were here to take part in three annual events the University held, which included Open House, Homecoming, and Parents' Weekend. The purpose of these events was to give as much information as possible about our school in a short time. Organized and assisted by Admissions and Student Services, volunteers and faculty members welcomed prospective students, their families, and the parents of current students. Many were involved in a series of activities. Over all, the weekend was a success, despite the impending weather.

Almost every college holds an Open House, which is the day where individuals interested in future attendance can take a closer look at what the school has to offer. The University of Bridgeport held their Open House on Sunday, November 6. There were college presentations made for each of the divisions by their administrators, as well as department presentations to help answer questions about specific majors. There were also representatives from various clubs and organizations on campus, because everyone knows life at UB is more than taking classes and eating in Marina.

Of course, there were plenty of students on hand to help out. On Saturday, Nov. 5, tours were planned for parents and Alumni. Unfortunately, however, only one tour was given due to the pouring rain. Yet volunteers were still very busy setting up decorations, giving directions, and clearing up the many concerns about the University as they were asked.

Meanwhile, students in the dorms actively engaged in a dorm decorating contest. The winners were then announced at the Farewell Reception which took place later in the Tower Room. Seeley came in first, followed by Cooper, then the Commuter's Lounge. In fact, the commuters were quite pleased with placing third because it was the first time they had in several years. The afternoon reception was relaxing for everyone. Refreshments were served and a hearty thanks was given to all who had participated.

For the celebration of Homecoming Weekend, an Alumni dinner took place Saturday evening in the social room of the student center. President Janet Greenwood was there to deliver a welcome speech. Afterwards, a sock-hop dance was held in the downstairs pub which the Alumni seemed to enjoy very much.

Last, but not least, the Flying Karamazov Brothers came to UB to entertain us. It is really no wonder that the show was close to a sell out in Mertens Theater. It was a series of acts that combined comedy with juggling. Many parents came with their children and a good time was held by all. It should be stated that although the overall turnout for the weekend was less than expected, those who came left feeling good about the University of Bridgeport.

Black Student Alliance

Celebrates Unity

by Renee Tibbals,
News Editor

How does one turn a huge, dull room into an elegant ballroom? First, take three hundred black, gold, and white balloons, cluster them in rows, and graciously rise up on ribbons through streamers connecting the wall to the floor, creating a triangle. Then hang ferns and stand trees around for a lively splash of color. Finally, add two hundred gorgeous people, and you're ready for a night to remember!

Sunsight was the name of the band who mesmerized the audience with soft, mellow, rhythmic tones at the Black Student Alliance's (BSA) Annual Homecoming Cabaret last Friday. Among a list of billings, Ada Dyer, the lead singer of the band has a new album in the stores titled "Meant To Be."

In an effort to reach out to high school students who would like to pursue higher education, the BSA sponsored an essay contest for high school students. The winner of this contest was a senior at Warren Harding High School, Miss Yadira Rodriguez who wrote about the need for people to become united so that love, compassion, and hope can continue to live in the hearts of many. In her essay, Miss Rodriguez emphasizes that "without unity, none of us would be here today." As a part of the winning package, Yadira's essay was read by Cabaret Committee Member Wallace Southerland III, who commented that "unity has been buried for centuries; tonight it is resurrected and we must make it last forever."

Another phase of the night's event was a guest speaker. Julian Braxton, President of the Bridgeport Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was guest speaker. Mr. Braxton spoke on the history of the progressive organization as well as its role in combating drugs, racism, and other societal ailments.

Furthermore, after the informative message, attendees leaped to the dance floor as Sunsight began to play more harmonizing tunes. The saxophone rang out tones which set everyone's feet to motion. Once again, Ada graced us with one of Whitney Houston's slow melodies, "Saving All My Love," which brought tears to a few eyes.

Besides the spectacular decor, the fashions of the evening added to the eloquence. The ladies brandished dresses of contoured satin, accented with soft puffs of lace and ribbon. The men showed off sleek tuxedos and highly polished shoes. Merrymaking was easy due to the sophisticated, yet romantic atmosphere that only the BSA can create.

Towards the end of the evening, Certificates of Recognition were given to members of the Cabaret Committee and the essay winner. After which, the members of BSA and advisor were recognized and applauded for a job well done.

Then came the moment everyone was waiting for...

the announcement and crowning of the King and Queen of the Cabaret.

Sanford Dowling was crowned King and Paula Knuckles, head of the BSAs "Big Brother, Big Sister" program, was crowned Queen. Both were recognized for their commitment to the work and mission of the organization. After being crowned, the two led everyone in a dance to the theme song: (Umoja:) "Make It Last Forever." The rest of the night was spent "boogying" as said by advisor, Professor Kevyn Arthur.

BSA Members Stacy Riggins and Venus White seemed to agree that the band and DJ Herb really made the night special. Debbie Murry was particularly impressed with the decor and work that was put into the event. On the same note, Norma Smith thought awhile and finally exclaimed: "I enjoyed the whole thing."

"The chance to get away from books and let loose," said Anissa Timothy when asked about her reaction towards the event. When asked what they would add to make the night more special and memorable, almost all the ladies mentioned adding a professional photographer, as found at proms, would have been appreciated. Perhaps this could be taken into consideration by the BSA for next year. This notwithstanding, all was perfect to those who participated. From BSA to the UB community: Umoja—swahili for Unity—brothers and sisters, make it last forever!

ZBT And Homebase Merge Efforts to Help Bridgeport Youngsters

ZBT President Andy Monfreid and Homebase President Christine Cappuzzo at the ZBT chaperoned, Homebased Halloween celebration.

On Saturday, October 29, Homebase, a fairly new campus organization, sponsored a Halloween Party for students of local elementary and junior high school students; in fact, some college students were in attendance. The event was chaperoned by one of the more popular fraternities on campus—ZBT.

Many of the youngsters were excited about the celebration and was thrilled that others had taken an opportunity to prove that they care. Accolades are, indeed, necessary for ZBT for their positive role in this effort and the mission of Homebase. In the past, ZBT has been written off as a nonchalant fraternity concerned with nothing but booze, fast cars, and women. Indeed, ZBT has proven otherwise.

Homebase was organized this year by Christine Cappuzzo in efforts to provide area school students with positive young adult role models to whom they can look to and rely on for social, academic, and physical growth and development. Homebase meets every Tuesday on the top level of the Student Center. Call the Student Center for more information: 576-4076.

Attention Administration

Editor,

Most people would agree, and I am sure the administration would agree, that only way one can learn to speak a language properly is to hear the language spoken properly. Unfortunately for students who are required to take a foreign language at U.B., this is impossible to do outside of the classroom. The problem is that the university does not have a language lab. The irony is that almost all high schools, as well as most Jr. high schools have language labs.

Sadly, the university did have a language lab at one time. However, it was dismantled to make way for the university's expanding science and engineering departments. Regrettably, no one seems to know what became of the lab after it was dismantled.

If trying to learn a language without hearing it sounds difficult, and it is, the university's administration has succeeded in making it even more difficult. In order to try and boost registration in foreign language, the administration rescheduled the classes (at least in Spanish) to meet twice a week for 1 hour and 15 minutes. What this has achieved is to limit the potential for students to learn even by exposing them to the language only twice a week.

In many particular foreign language class a good deal of these two days is spent listening to the tapes that are designed to go along with the book and workbook texts. Almost all foreign language text books are designed with corresponding tapes to be used in a language lab. The time spent listening to tapes in the classroom should be done in a language lab. The truth is that all the universities I know of, this is how the classes are run.

When students in their second semester of a language are mispronouncing some of the basic words of a language, we have a problem. A problem that the university administration should be ashamed of.

However, this editorial is not meant to simply gripe about a serious problem. I am of the opinion that if people spent half as much time trying to solve problems as they do complaining about them the world would be almost problem free.

Now, coming down from my soap box I have two proposals for the administration:

1. If the university is going to require a foreign language then the university needs a language lab. Therefore, my first proposal is simply biting the bullet and buying the equipment for a lab. Charging a lab fee in the long run will offset the initial cost. (The university could also seek a grant for the lab).

2. If it is too costly an initial investment or the university can not secure a grant, then the university should seek an arrangement with ELS (English Language Studies). They have a language lab on the sixth floor of the library, and I am sure something could be arranged. After all, they do rent space from the university.

In short the current administration should make sure that, come spring semester, there is a language lab at this university for its students who are required to take a foreign language! If they can not provide a language lab, then they should stop requiring the sham they call foreign language studies. Since the latter is no solution, I hope the administration has the wisdom to come up with a viable solution.

The Need For The Strategic Defense Initiative

"The art of war is of vital importance to the state. It is a matter of life and death, a road to safety or to ruin. Hence under no circumstances can it be neglected."

Sun Tzu, The Art of War

To the great tactician there is nothing of greater value than terrain, that is, distances, great and small, danger and security, open ground and narrow passes, rivers, seas, skies and now space.

Space (one is tempted to say "the final frontier") is now in question. Is it necessary to national security, to make space the United State's Maginot Line, or Great Wall? Without any doubt, the answer is "yes!"

The name of this defensive blockade is the Strategic Defense Initiative (or Star Wars).

Star Wars is, contrary to popular opinion, a multi-purpose project, comprised of short term and long term goals as well as a final objective.

There are a multitude of short term goals. Four major goals are: One: The government's investment in such a monumental project will greatly stimulate the economic society. Two: which is very much related to one is an increase in the need for labor. Skilled and unskilled workers would be needed in a project of this size, importance, and need. Three: Star Wars is very expensive, yet the United States can afford it, but can the Soviets? One of the major short term goals of the United States in the SDI project is to cause a strain on the Soviet economic system. Another major short term goal is to replace Submarine Launched Ballistic Missiles with SDI as a second nuclear deterrent. Although the United States reigns indisputably supreme in submarine technology, the Soviet Union grows ever near to being able to track even our quietest subs. If this occurs SLBMs will become near obsolete as any sort of deterrent.

The long term goal is much more noble. It is to create a Ballistic Missile Defense system constructed with beyond the state of the art technology, using satellites and anti-satellite defenses (ASATs) and employing lasers, electromagnetic projectiles and similar devices in composing a shield around the United States.

The final objective of the Strategic Defense Initiative is the exaltation of present U.S. and Soviet diplomatic stagnation, to force an end to the illusion of the political philosophy that Mutually Assured Destruction (MAD) is a military safeguard to force missile carried nuclear warheads into obsolescence, and the most honorable cause... world peace.

There are four major arguments that pertain to the Strategic Defense Initiative. They are: one: (Diplomatic): Is Star Wars threatening any present treaties? How do our allies feel towards its creation? How do the Soviets feel? Two: (Economic) Can we afford SDI at present? Is it cost effective? How does it compare to other military and non-military programs? Three: (Scientific): Can it be created and will it work? Four: (Strategic): Will it accomplish its goals? Is it a military must? In order to answer these questions, money must be allocated to SDI research.

SDI is the research division of the armed forces, and to forgo it would be as damaging as eliminating rations. It was President Kennedy who said: "If we are strong our strengths will speak for us, but if we are weak there will be no need for words."

George Washington: "The best way to prevent war is to prepare for it."

A Little Encouragement . . .

Editor,

I was extremely distressed and appalled at the trash editorials that were printed in last week's issue. I cannot believe that one would interpret your actions as being sheer conceitedness. Mr. Southerland, you should be proud of yourself. Indeed, you are a positive role model and thus far you have proven to be successful. You have a right to be proud of your accomplishments because they deserve to be commended.

Although there are some who may look down on you, you must continue to believe that there are even more who appreciate the contributions that you have made to this University.

You should continue to hold your head up high, and speak out for what you know is right. You are entitled to your opinions, and if you choose to voice them, then that is exactly what you should do. This is America and you have the right to speak. There are those who would probably like to hang you for your alleged actions, but under our legal system, you sir, are innocent until proven guilty. No one on this campus has a right to accuse you of anything.

Mr. Southerland, I am honestly convinced that the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. would smile on your actions. You have stood up for what you believe; you have taken the verbal abuse and the written abuse in a very respectable manner. The fact that you have made mistakes cannot be disputed, but you are human and we all are subject to error. No one here is better than anyone else. Likewise, no one here is perfect. The important thing is that you have acknowledged that there is a problem and you are not afraid to make a statement. I say to you: You have been placed in an important position because you are wise and very much capable. You must not let anyone or anything cause you to fail. If it was your choice to place your picture on the front page of the Scribe, then that's wonderful because it is indeed news. You have prevailed over your competitors. And there are many of us who are proud of that.

Again Mr. Southerland, you are a prominent young figure on this campus and you must not your good be ill spoken of. Remember that you must be as wise as the serpent, but as humble as a dove. The road to success is long and difficult, but only the strong and wise will stay on top. I wish you much luck and success in your endeavors.

Siouxzan's Beat

Hi Kids:

If you wouldn't mind, I'd like to have your attention for a few minutes. You see, the editors of the Scribe have graciously permitted me to write this tacky little column for their incredibly classy newspaper. I, myself, regard this as a great honor, but then again, I don't get out much. So I was wondering, if it wasn't too much trouble, maybe you could take four or five minutes out of your staggering social lives to maybe, possibly read about what I have to say. None of it is too politically important. I'm not here to save the world, although I do feel awful sorry for those poor trapped whales (Is it just me or do they resemble the likes of three, giant, diseased cucumbers??) in Alaska. Nope, no, nothing I have to say is too earth shaking. I'm just one of those FM majors who believe lobotomies are always in fashion and I thought I'd add a little humor to your lives. So, if you'd like to read my column, I thank you. If you couldn't care less about what I have to say then I'll just have to muddle through life, a poor, rejected slob. It's up to you but, for your sake, show some taste for once in your pathetic lives and read my column.

I thank you,
Siouxzan

Orel who?

Being a loyal New York Mets fan, the World Series playoffs left me very disappointed. I mean, who are these guys, these LA Dodgers?? Last time we'd heard from them they were doing battle in the Series against the NY Yankees, and everyone from New York wanted to lynch them for running away to LA in the first place. What, were they too good for Brooklyn?? Then suddenly here we are at the playoffs and my Mets are doing battle with Tommy's Dodgers.

Well, the thought that my amazing Mets were not going to pull off the Championship never crossed my mind. "Orel who?" I said. But by the time game four had come and gone I was starting to get nervous. "What if my Mets couldn't pull it off?" I said.

Hey, what am I thinking, of course they can. Didn't you see that New York game they played in the rain?? The place looked like a football stadium, the fans were freezing to death and Keith Hernandez was crawling through the mud in attempts to lead his team to victory. Watching this game I thought I had seen it all. I mean these Dodger guys may as well pack it up and go on home. They can't field, they can't hit. Go home to your sunshine and your 90 degree paradise, leave us and our real baseball alone if you can't storm the weather. Whimps, all of you. Run on home, Tommy will make you some nice hot soup for dinner so your nice California noses don't catch cold.

But, as I told you, after that fourth game even I had my doubts, although Mr. Howell was suspended and half the team was on the injured list. I started to blame our poor luck on my roommate Joanne, an avid Boston fan whose been bitter towards the Mets ever since the '86 Series. Whenever Joanne happened to come within a five mile radius of a playoff game the Dodgers would score and my Mets would lose. So I banned her from all television. No baseball for her. I took our TV upstairs and locked it in my friends room. No way was she going to blow this Series for us.

Well I think that the second inning in game seven tells the ending of my story quite well. It wasn't Ron's fault, it wasn't Davey's fault, it wasn't even Joanne's fault. It was that Orel guy. Who was he?? Where did Tommy find him?? And where can we get one??

Hello UB! Let me introduce myself. My name is Renee. I am a freshman, and I have a few kind words to say to describe my reaction to college. Like most high school seniors, I had high expectations, and high anxiety about college. In general, the teachers in high school led me to believe that the professors in college would just about make me regret the day I was born. At first I was afraid that if I asked a question during a lecture, I'd get a reply something like: "I explained that in class! Isn't it in your notes?" or "My dear, how did you ever make it to college?" Two days before classes began, my stomach produced gallons of excess acid, as it will when I'm extremely nervous. I never guzzled so much Alka Seltzer in my life!

What a pleasant surprise! I've been here two months now. My sanity is intact, and I'm really looking forward to the next four years! I feel that a few commendations are in order.

First is to President Janet Greenwood and her Purple Knight staff, as well as professors who helped to make life a little easier upon entering UB. I got a lot out of Orientation, and my mother learned a great deal about how to "let go" in one of those seminars offered before school. (Talk about letting to, she's called me THREE times since August!)

Next I'd like to thank and praise Dr. Blake and the entire Basic Studies Faculty and staff. They are always there with encouragement, support, and plenty of helpful tutors. My professors are very generous with their free time to help whenever someone, like me, "just plain doesn't understand."

I am currently involved in Christian Fellowship at Carstensen Hall, (among starting to write for the Scribe and pledging for OPA—"Hi girls!!"). This was another pleasant surprise. I always pictured a college minister having grey hair, spectacles, and giving sermons in inaudible monotones while everyone in the pews caught up on much-needed sleep. Well, I'm happy to say that the Protestant Chaplain in Carstensen Hall has black hair, contact lenses, and is very enthusiastic about his work! His name is Tim Solomon, for the few that haven't met him yet, as he is the chairman of just about every committee on campus. Spiritually, I've found a place in UB.

In conclusion, I'd like to say to those I've mentioned, and to those I haven't, (you know who you are), KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK!!

Thank You

Laziness: A Campus Disease

by Gabe Sasso

One of the main problems with this University is attitude: the students attitude. They can constantly be heard complaining that there is nothing to do, yet they do not take advantage of what is available. Specifically I am speaking of 89.1 WRUB on Campus Radio. The name says it all, on campus, it is for the students. How many actually listen though?

They have nothing to lose tuning in for a little while, they have only to gain. All types of music are played and there is certain to be one they will enjoy. If they do tune in and do not hear something they like, they can make a request. Imagine that! Picking up the phone and dialing x4540 and actually speaking! If the D.J. is in a good mood he may put you on the air, if you know him he may invite you down to observe. However, most students are too lazy to pick up the phone or even tune in.

But there is even more to gain. Some D.J.'s will be giving away records and other prizes. This proves that even the pure capitalist has a reason to listen. Those who are not big music fans will certainly be entertained and enlightened by the talk show segment in some shows. Spontaneity and having a rollicking good time are the goals during talk show segments. Many important issues will be discussed such as anal rape, country music as a social disease, and the benefits of smoking Jello.

Believe me, those who tune in will not be disappointed.

The station offers a very wide variety of musical tastes and styles. There are many shows which play only Heavy Metal. The best of these is Joe Murphy's metal show on Tuesday nights from 8:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. Directly following Mr. Murphy's show, tune in to hear the entire spectrum of music, besides country, during my show. On Monday nights listen to rock and pop along with getting a good laugh on Dave Vermeire's show from 10:00 p.m. to 12:00 p.m. This is just a small sampling of what the station has to offer. There are new music shows, AOR (Album Oriented Rock) shows and many other things. So turn that knob and start tuning in.

UB Students Win Local and Regional Awards

At the October dinner meeting, the American Production and Inventory Control Society (APICS) recognized and rewarded six CBPM students for their contributions to the International Paper Writing Contest.

Three undergraduate students, winning at local level of Fairfield Chapter of APICS, were: Yeunho Chung, Cynthia Broyles, and Sven-Erik Hodt. The graduate level winners were: Gary Voyda, John E. Jagodnick, and Juliette Nolan.

In the follow-up regional level competition, the winners were: Chung, Voyda, Jagodnick, and Nolan.

Copies of the winning articles are available for perusal at the main desk of Wahlstrom Library.

Purple Knight Booters Headed for NECC and NCAA Tournament

The University of Bridgeport men's soccer team is headed for the New England Collegiate Conference's first-ever post-season tournament Saturday, Nov. 4 at Keene State College in New Hampshire.

The Purple Knights finished third in the NECC with a 4-3 league record behind the nation's number one ranked team New Hampshire College (21-0, 7-0 NECC) and Southern Connecticut which edged out UB with a 4-1-2 record.

UB will open the NECC tournament against SCSU at 11 a.m. on Sumner Joyce Field. NHC will battle Franklin Pierce (14-3-2, 3-2-2 NECC) in the 2 p.m. game.

The survivors will meet, for the league championship, on Sunday Nov. 5 at 2 p.m. at the same location.

The Purple Knights, ranked fifth in the nation, are a prime candidate for one of 12 national bids in the upcoming NCAA Division II Tournament. Even though, UB is one of six teams from the Northeast in the national top 20, its record against those schools is 3-2 with victories over Keene State, New York Tech. and C.W. Post. The national bids are to be released on Monday, Nov. 7.

In its final three games of the season, all on the road, UB defeated Dowling College, 4-1 and Franklin Pierce, 1-0 before falling to Southern Connecticut, 2-1 in overtime.

Against Dowling College, freshman Craig Whittington netted two goals and assisted on another as the Purple Knights came from behind to defeat the Golden Lions, 4-1 at the Oakdale, NY school.

Sheldon Neal and Ulrich Muller also tallied goals for the winners.

Freshman Joe DiDomizio allowed the lone goal to pick up his second win of the season.

On Oct. 29, the Knights travelled to Rindge, NH for a key NECC matchup with Franklin Pierce College.

Bridgeport was caught in a defensive battle until Nasir Al-Riyami broke free at the 31:19 mark and blasted what proved to be the game winning goal past the Raven goalie. Neal set up the junior striker with his ninth goal of the season.

Tom Patterson picked up his fourth in five appearances this season despite being bombarded with 21 FPC shots. The senior keeper made nine saves on the afternoon.

In the final regular-season game, the Purple Knights knotted up with their league rival Southern Connecticut (15-4-3).

UB broke a scoreless tie with 10:45 remaining in regulation when Whittington booted a loose ball past a sprawling Owl goalkeeper.

Southern would not sit down though as it returned the favor exactly three minutes later after an initial shot was smothered by a Purple Knight defender but the loose ball was driven past a blinded Patterson.

The first overtime went scoreless. SCSU junior strike Antony Vaughn tallied the game-winner with less than three minutes remaining in the second overtime.

Bridgeport ended the regular season with a 14-3-2 overall record.

Phi Kappa Phi Offers Graduate Fellowships

The general criteria considered in the selection process are scholastic achievement, high standardized test scores (when applicable), transcript record, honors and enrichment programs, promise of success in graduate or professional study, leadership, participation in university and community activities, experience, evaluation by instructors, and expression of study plan and career goal.

Phi Kappa Phi is the only major national scholastic Honor Society which recognizes academic excellence in all disciplines. It was founded in 1887, and today there are 245 chapters in universities and colleges throughout the nation. The Fellowship Program was established in 1932 and since then has honored over 925 scholars with fellowship awards and 383 scholars with honorable mention awards.

The campus deadline for submission of applications is February 3, 1989.

The University of Bridgeport chapter of Phi Kappa Phi National Honor Society is inviting applications from outstanding senior students for a Graduate Fellowship for up to $6000 for first-year graduate or professional study. Fifty (50) of these fellowships will be awarded nationwide. Thirty (30) additional students will receive Honorable Mention Awards for $500. Each Phi Kappa Phi Chapter may nominate one student for these awards.

Graduating seniors with outstanding academic and leadership records should contact Phi Kappa Phi Secretary, Dean De Laurentis, College of Business, Mandeville (x4386) for additional information.

Hurting from Crisis or Heartache?

"I lift up my eyes to the hills—where does my help come from? My help comes from the Lord, the Maker of heaven and earth... He who watches over you will not slumber... the Lord is your shade at your right hand... the Lord will watch over your coming and going both now and forevermore."

Psalms 121

At least once in our lives we face a crisis or trauma which we feel is too overwhelming to deal with. Fortunately, for most of us, there is at least one person who loves us and will help us through. But what of the people who are alone? The truth is, they're not alone. God watches over everyone, in joy and in sorrow. The next time you hurt and feel that no one is there for you, don't hang your head in depression. Raise your head to the sky and rejoice, for the Lord will always be there.
